TURNER SMITH GOT TWO YEARS OR $750

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 17.—This afternoon Judge Peebles entered a sentence of two years on the roads or the payment of $750 to the girl he mistreated in the case of Turner Smith, convicted Saturday of assaulting Miss Lillian Whitson. Ex-Governor Aycock made a special plea for leniency and insisted that the young man could not raise the amount of money exacted in lieu of the road sentence. However he was given time to see what could be done. Solicitor Norris opposed delaying the matter for raising fine, saying that Gov. Aycock had said the money could not be raised. However Gov. Aycock took the ground that he didn't know and that he was only judging of the ability of the prisoner and his friends to raise money by the amount that was paid to him as a counsel fee. Judge Peebles stirred a general laugh at the expense of the ex-governor by exclaiming: "O well, that is no indication. You are a candidate for the United States Senate and are not expected to exact high fees from the people." "That candidacy and the expense it may incur should necessitate the highest possible fees" said Gov. Aycock while the crowd was laughing at his expense.

TAFT

To Decide the Wiley-Wickersham Case Soon After Receiving Wiley's Report.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 17.—It became known at the White House today that President Taft will decide the Wiley-Wickersham case within 26 hours after he has received Dr. Wiley's answer from Secretary Wilson, of the department of agriculture. He will hold a conference with Mr. Wilson and Mr. Wickersham concerning the case.

There are no intimations as to what the decision will be, but it is not believed that the President will follow the recommendations of Attorney General Wickersham and ask for the resignation of the pure food expert. This give rise to rumors that either Secretary Wilson or Attorney General Wickersham will resign from the cabinet.

A sensation was sprung today when it was learned that Floyd Robinson, formerly one of the chief chemists in the department, was dismissed for the good of the service by Secretary Wilson. The significance of this can be understood when it is recalled that Robinson is the star witness in the Benzoate case now pending in Indianapolis, which may prove a death blow to the use of benzoate as a preservative. The Robinson case makes it likely that the matter will not stop with Wiley, but it is intended to reach all men that does as he does in the enforcement of the pure food law. The whole matter is now being investigated by a congressional committee and startling developments are expected to follow.

The sub-commisison will report in detail their findings as to the merits of the books when the commission and sub-commission resume joint sessions August 3 for the final adoption of the text books. It will be largely on the reports and recommendations that the sub-commission of educators make to the commission that the adoption will be made as the commission will have the right to confer with publishers for cuts in the prices bid in the event the only hinderance to adoption is the price at which the book is offered in the sealed bid.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORY IS PREDICTED BY CONGRESSMAN BERGER

Wisconsin Socialist Says Democrats Have Easy Chance to Win in 1912.

Milwaukee, July 17.—Before leaving for his summer home in northern Wisconsin, after greeting his party followers, at the solid Democratic picnic Congressman Berger fully discussed Washington politics, in the course of which discussion he predicted a Democratic victory in the next election, though he expects to see still more Socialists elected to Congress. WIEHE

Told William Burgess That He Subscribed to Lorimer "Jack-pot" Fund.

Special to Telegram.

Washington, July 17.—Highly important new testimony adding strength to the theory tha there was bribery in the election of Senator Lorimer was taken before the investigating committee today when it listened to the evidence of William Burgess, who said that he knew there was a "jack pot" fund to secure the election of Lorimer because he had heard C. F. Wiehe say that he had subscribed $10,000 towards it. Burgess was before the Helm investigating committee, but he did not tell this fact.

Burgess stated that Father Green, a Catholic priest of Chicago, had refused absolution to a detective until he told all he knew about the Lorimer case.

GUBERNATIORIAL-SENATORIAL MIXUP PROBABLE IN STATE

Special to Telegram.

Raleigh, July 17.—About the latest and most discussed political development here is what is believed to be a strong indication that the gubernatorial contest for the nomination in 1912 is being drawn into the senatorial fight in so far as the contest between Senator Simmons and Governor Kitchin is concerned and that there may yet be a third candidate for governor in the field—one to represent the Kitchin element of the party. Ever since the Charlotte convention in which Kitchin won the nomination for governor over Locke Craig there have been many who insist that the 1912 nomination for governor is the due of Mr. Craig and that there is really a party obligation growing out of that contest to give him the next nomination. For several months W. C. Newland, president of the senate and lieutenant governor, has been an avowed candidate for governor. Neither of them have special political alliance with Governor Kitchin and Mr. Craig and Senator Simmons have been closely allied. This is giving rise, now that the fight is drawing up so sharply between Senator Simmons and Governor Kitchin, to a disposition on the part of some of Kitchin's friends to agitate the question of making a fight on the nomination of Mr. Craig lest his influence, made more powerful by the nomination for governor, be used in the senatorial campaign, between the July convention and the vote in the senatorial primary in the fall, for the furtherance of Simmons' interest. Friends of Mr. Craig are insisting that Mr. Craig will steer clear of the senatorial fight entirely and that the alarms on the part of the friends of Gov. Kitchin are groundless. Whether this insistance can keep off the precipitation of a mix-up of the senatorial and the gubernatorial contests as indicated remains to be seen. Also there is a possibility that the part that ex-Governor Aycock and Chief Justice Walter Clark play as the other candidates in the senatorial fight may effect very largely the possibility of there being another candidate for governor in the field. This talk is involving again C. W. Tillett, as the possible third candidate for governor to represent the Kitchin wing. Mr. Tillett has not publicly receded from his public intimation some time ago that he would not be a candidate for governor.

GATES' CONDITION IS MUCH IMPROVED

TRUSTS IN ENGLAND.

The Philadelphit Record takes up the allegation of some of the high tariff boosters to the effect that trusts exist in England and denies the truth of the assertion. The story on its face is recogniable as false. It would be almost impossible to organize a trust, such as we have in this country, in England or any other free trade country. Suppose that the tariff wall was broken down and any one of the trusts of this country had to face the competition of the world in its line, it is evident that it would no longer be a trust, as we understand the meaning of the word in this country. In that case the trust would no longer control the market in its line of manufacture or selling, and it would cease to be a trust or monopoly. Trusts have come into existence in this country through the support afforded their operations by excessively high tariffs. Men who have been able to secure a practical monopoly of one line of business, having that business protected from world competition by a tariff wall, have been enabled to maintain their monopoly. As they control the production in this country they control the markets of this country from which foreign competition is excluded by the tariff.

There are no trusts in England or any other free trade country. No monopoly can be established in any line of manufacturing, production or trade where the business must compete with the world wide business of other nations engaged in the same line of manufacturing, production or trade. The modern trust or monopoly is an American product, brought into existence and fostered by our system of protective tariffs. If the tariffs were wiped out and this country placed on a free trade basis, there would be no more heard of monopolies in this country. American manufacturers and producers would come in competition with the manufacturers and producers of the world, and they would have no monopoly of the home markets.

In refuting the charge that there are trusts in free trade England, the Philadelphia Record says:

"In the Senate the other day enemies of reciprocity did not scruple to repeat the fiction that Trusts such as despoil the people of this country exist also in free trade England. The persistent propagators of this fable in face of the fact that such gigantic combinations as the Steel Trust, the Sugar Trust and the Lumber Trust cannot exist where free trade combats them are referred to a famous work of Mrs. Opie on the different ways of perverting the truth. It was said of Napoleon that he never hesitated to lie whenever it served his purpose and that he lied at St. Helena almost to his last breath. The propagandists of the tale of spoliatory Trusts under British free trade are Napoleonic in this respect if in nothing else.

"The cable has just reported how English courts and juries deal with promoters of wormy joint stock companies. Most of the alleged Trusts in England are companies and firms of limited liabilities owing their success only to the superior quality and cheapness of their goods. These are the sole conditions on which they can thrive. In stead of being subject to Parliamentary investigations and government prosecutions they are welcomed by British consumers. Here, on the other hand, the great industrial Trusts now undergoing investigations in Congress and prosecutions in the Federal Courts, owe their existence to the favoritism of unjust tariff laws. That is the difference.

"In this country the Trusts thrive in gathering the spoils from the people because the tariff prohibits or obstructs free competition with them. In England when a combination undertakes to monopolize trade in any article and force its price above a normal level, competition flows in from every direction to redress the balance in favor of consumers, and that is the end of Trusts of our American type. Yet the gigantic lie of 'Trusts in Free Trade England' will still keep marching around in seven-league boots."

"The parcels post is a good thing as far as it goes," says the Columbia State. Wonder how good it would be if it went the limit throughout the country?

If Congress adjourns by August 7th Champ Clark can go on the Chautauqua circuit and get back some of that money he has been losing at the rate of a thousand dollars a week.

Why should a Republican support a Democratic candidate for office or office holder, even though the Democrat is tainted with Republicanism? There must be a reason when this peculiar state of affairs is found prevailing.

Senator Terrell of Georgia, has resigned and it begins to look like the resignation is not of the Joe Bailey brand. Perhaps the Senator forgot to attach the string.

Perhaps it did not occur to the Georgia Legislature that in electing Hoke Smith to the United States Senate a slap in the face was being administered to the Richmond Times-Dispatch. The Times-Dispatch appears to regard it as a personal insult.

Somebody came forward with the statement that "Woodrow Wilson is purely and simply a college professor." That was the opinion of the New Jersey political bosses before Wilson became Governor. It would be interesting to know if the bosses still entertain that opinion.

Says the Shelby Highlander: "There are plenty of folks who never make mistakes. They are under the sod." True; and while they were alive some of them conducted newspapers and the remainder were always certain that they could beat the newspaper men at the job of running the papers.

The High Point Enterprise is pardonably gratified because of the showing made by that township in the tax assessments. It is probable that High Point township will lead in Guilford county with the greatest increase in assessments. This cannot be definitely determined until the assessments for Greensboro are compiled. However, High Point's showing is something to be proud of, no matter whether that township leads or has to follow Moorehead or Gilmer.

The Columbia State says: "Perhaps no citizen of this Republic can honestly think wrong on more questions in a given length of time than the Major can." The "Major" here referred to, as may be surmised by an intelligent public, is the editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch. We venture to remark in this connection that the Columbia State never dared to say such things about the Major until he put the distance of North Carolina and a large part of Virginia between himself and the office of the Columbia State.

The gentlemen who are after Dr. Wiley may get his scalp, but they are going to have to fight a majority of the people of this country in order to accomplish their purpose. Dr. Wiley may have been wrong occasionally, but he has been the consistent enemy of fakes and frauds, adulterated foods and drugs and of the army of people who live off the public nowadays by defrauding the people through various tricks and schemes as well as through adulteration and the methods of the "cure-all" fakes. Dr. Wiley is undoubtedly the friend of the masses and has been working in their interest. Any attempt to have him displaced from official position and to stop his work is certain to raise a storm of protest. The storm is already brewing and the instigators of the attack on Wiley will have to look sharp to avoid getting caught in this storm.

Hoke Smith finds it impossible to run Georgia and the United States Senate at the same time. As Hoke finds he can not be in two places at the same time, he has decided to hold the office of Governor and run Georgia for a while before taking a hand in national affairs. This determination has caused a peculiar condition of affairs in the Empire State. Senator Terrell has resigned and Governor Smith has refused to accept his resignation. Senator Terrell says he was appointed to fill out the unexpired term of the late Senator Clay and to serve until Clay's successor was elected. Governor Smith says he was appointed to serve until Clay's successor presents his credentials to the United States Senate and qualifies for service. The situation furnishes much copy for the newspapers and a live subject for discussion in Georgia.

Children's Playgrounds.

The North Carolina Public Service Company—Greensboro's public utilities concern—has offered the Junior Civic League of that city the use of an extensive vacant lot conveniently situated, for the purposes of a playground. The company is building better than it knows. Our North Carolina cities are yet small enough for this important matter to be arranged without undue inconvenience, but before many years approximately all suitable places will have been preempted and costly and difficult work will be required to remedy the mistakes of the past.

Country children do not lack ample opportunity for healthful outdoor exercise, the conditions of their routine duties assuring this at all times. The city-reared child needs the fresh air and the room to play just as much as the other, but it is only within recent years that the provision of a children's playground has been looked upon as a municipal responsibility. The larger cities throughout the country are awakening to the need, however, and are supplying the playgrounds as best they may.

Charlotte is yet close enough on all sides to the open country to feel this kind of pressure faintly, if at all, but such a condition will not continue indefinitely. Factories, stores, residences are creeping further and further from "the square." There has been a little vague discussion of securing a permanent playground of suitable character and sufficient extent, but it has not as yet crystalized. We have a number of earnest men and women who are interested in the comfort and proper development of the younger generation. Would it not be an excellent idea for these to tackle the problem before its difficulties become too great?—Charlotte Observer.

USE THE BELLOWS

By CARA REESE.)

"Becalmed in some zone of the soul," is the way a certain writer describes a case similar to yours.

That is, you propose to a girl the day after she has accepted the other fellow, you reach the scene of heroic action after some one else ahs palyed the hero. You get there the minute afteh the job has been handed out to your competitor; you never were and never can be, try as hard as you may, a "Johnny on the spot," when to be a "Johnny" might mean glorification and advancement.

Jonah on the spot were a more fitting appellation. But it appears now that you belong to the "becalmed" type of craft on the high seas of life and are deserving of some consideration, instead of the usual tantalizing laugh at your expense. There is a smile in pickle always for the swain who comes gallantly reining up his foaming steed after the fair maiden has been carraied away by the more speedy lover. There are remarks more caustic than entertaining when the "uniform" the "hook and ladder," the "patrol," or "ambulance" heave into sight after the exciting activities are over. There is a cynical quiver on the face of the populace over the perspiring victim who is "left" whether on wharf, railroad station in the "game" or for the position.

The smile heretofore in some invidious way has suggested inferiority, dullness in perception and slowness in the motion as relates to the victim. The kindest of the observations is merely "hard luck." Cheer up; you are not to blame. You are "becalmed in some zone of the soul," where you are destined to await in stillness until you have drifted unconsciously beyond the highlands of contemplation and find yourself stirring again.

Or where you have been stayed and hindered in that current of prosaic activity has been intercepted by a power greater than your own. A "peace" ordered through no agency of your own will has been known to becalm the ocean of the soul, and to make quiet the operations of the mind and to delay motion and progress. You may not stir until the condition of calm be lifted and the breeze wafts freshly as an impetus to motion, both in mind and boot-heel. You cannot help it and must wait until the "spirit moves."'

Yes, you know what it is to be in a state of "becalm" when you would indite the letters, or compose the ode or make out the puzzles or write the prize story. You know what it is to be in a state of "becalm" when your spirits are leaden amid chores waiting in plenty, when the mending and decorating and the getting ready call loudly for action. You know what it is to be in a state of "becalm" when you do not care whether school keeps or not, or the train goes without you, or when to hasten means a hero medal.

Still, a state of "becalm" may be prolonged unduly. It might be well to get a "move on" in the "zone of the soul" about the time the other fellow is sailing or driving past you. Use the bellows.

The Perfection of The World

(By HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD)

It is not easy to look up at the infinite hue of the sky flooded with sunshine, and think it is not as fine as it ever can be; to look up through the deep vaults of night and measure off heaven after heaven with the near and distant stars, and fancy improvement possible; to see in what the landscape from the mountainside with its sea of hills, its long levels, and its melting colors, can be made more glorious.

Yet if it is not possible to our eyes, more perfect eyes may see the need, more perfect powehs be shaping the means. For why else was the huge gaseousness of the sun compressed and its planets sent rolling off, to what else are we to suppose the earth goes forward on her way in space, to what other end than ultimate perfection can the whole solar system be moving up with all its stellar mates to its central point, and the great pendulum of the starry motions be swinging backward and forward with boundless ages for one motion but that at each long swing the whole shall be finer than it was before, that the little earth itself become the fitter for the throne it bears in the thousand years of peace?

And if this is so, can we suppose that there is one particle of matter or of spirit that has not its portion of the work to do, is not directed upon that work, whether consciously or not, and is obedient to the great purpose only just so far as it obeys this direction?

If we find it impossible to imagine what part can be given us, with our infinitesimally small powers, in the perfection of the universe or the refining of the planet—for we know, of course, it does not mean we are merely to keep our flower beds bright and make two blades of grass grow where one grew before—perhaps we may find it worth while to consider whether it does not mean that by truth, patience, unselfishness, through countless generations, we are to transmute the very dust of the earth into the dust of heroes, martyrs and saints. If the earth is to be reduced are we not a part of the earth and is there to be no reducing in our own system as well as in the solar system?

GIRLS WHO MOPE

(By FRANCES WILEY.)

Time was when sweet and 20 used to be considered typical of light heartedness, mirth and happiness. Girls of that age were supposed to have hearts of featherweight. All the world was young to them; life was dear and bright; everything was true, everything was new; and, what perhaps was grandest of all, their faith in everybody and everything large and undimmed. At all times girls had their faults, of course, though they were no less lovable and sweet and charming on that account, but there seems on the part of the modern girls a tendency to despair and mope which their predecessors never displayed.

The fault is not altogether theirs. Their mothers are most to blame for it, they in turn being the victims of that spirit of unrest which pervades modern life. The fact is that the girl of the period is overfed with excitement and then, little boy at a school picnic, she cries if she cannot have more.

She wants perpetual change; she wants to shirk all duties that girls of other generations accepted as a matter of course, and in which they found rest—the duties, for example, of home life. The ceaseless striving after fame, either social or artistic, the race for a place in all those fields of labor into which they have entered without much thought of possible consequence, the continual pleasure seeking that marks every class, all tend to edge the nerve and bring about disappointment, with the result that the modern girls are becoming less and less merry, less and less filled with the joy of life, more and more pessimistic and harassed and nervous and unhappy.

FADS OF THE FASHIONS

Handkershiefs of finest linen are edged with black chantilly lace.

China buttons from Austria are new in the realm of dress trimmings.

Black satin and velvet slippers have much heavier soles than last year.

Gray tulle, embroidered in silver, is a new trimming for dressy gowns.

In hats there is a marked tendency to height in crowns and broader brims.

The stake toe in a modified form, is to be seen on the finer grade of slippers.

Marquisette blouses are high in favor and may be had in all styles and colorings.

For children a decided preference for the peasant style seems to be the growing fancy.

The Irish lace may be said to hold first place as decoration for lingerie frocks and blouses.

Assessment Increase in Wilkes County

North Wilkesboro, July 17.—The new assessment of property for Wilkes county amounts to $2,849,488, as compared with the 1910 assessment of $2,158,175. The increase is $691,313, or 32 per cent. In Somers township the increase was 78 per cent, while the smallest was 17 per cent in Union. The assessment of real estate in North Wilkesboro is $576,317, representing an increase of 21 per cent, and for Wilkesboro it is $288,727, with an increase of 32 per cent.

The general offices of the Turner-White Coffin Company are soon to be moved to Winston and W. B. Carleton, in charge of the office here, will move to Winston to make his home.

The big good roads celebration planned for July 21 here is expected to draw a large crowd and result in an active organization for the improvement of roads in this county. The Southern's good roads train will arrive here on the date specified at 2 o'clock and, besides the speeches by the experts accompanying the train, the address of the day will be made by Congressman Robert N. Page and H. B. Varner, president of the State Highway Association, will make an address.

The blackberry industry of this county is an important one and amounts to something like a hundred thousand dollars a year. There are several firms that do a large business in canning and shipping the berries and several thousand dollars a day is often paid out for them here. They are brought into town by the wagon load and shipped out by the car load. In spite of the dry weather the crop will be almost as abundant as usual, though in some sections the berries are not so large.

DON'T EXPERIMENT

You Will Make No Mistake If You Follow This Advice.

Never neglect your kidneys.

If you have pain in the back, urinary disorders, dizziness and nervousness, it's time to act and no time to experiment. These are all symptoms of kidney trouble, and you should seek a remedy which is known to act on the kidneys.

Doan's Kidney Pills is the remedy to use. No need to experiment. It has cured many stubborn cases in this vicinity.

Can Greensboro residents demand further proof than that contained in the following testimonial?

W. H. Newson, Lakeside St., Burlington, N. C., says: "I noticed that my kidneys were disordered abuot a year ago. The kidney secretions became unnatural, then my back began to bother me, making it hard for me to attend to my work. I used many remedies, but without success, until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills. The results both surprised and delighted me. My system was soon rid of kidney complaint and there has never been a return attack."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

It's queer how little bits of women seem to act so much like big chunks of dynamite.

Those Who Take Foley Kidney Pills

For their kidney and bladder ailments, and for annoying urinary irregularities are always grateful both for the quick and permanent relief they afford, and for their tonic and strengthening effect as well. Try Foley Kidney Pills. Howard Gardner.

The first thing the average man who has any money tries to do is not to have it any longer.

Hay Fever and Summer Colds

Must be relieved quickly and Foley's Honey and Tar Compound will do it. E. M. Stewart, 1034 Wolfram St., Chicago, writes: "I have been greatly troubled during the hot summer months with Hay Fever and find that by using Foley's Honey and Tar Compound I get great relief." Many others who suffer similarly will be glad to benefit by Mr. Stewart's experience. Howard Gardner.

If a man could own a thousand automobiles, he'd want to own something else he couldn't.

Foley Kidney Pills are composed of ingredients specially selected for their corrective, healing, tonic, and stimulating effect upon the kidneys, bladder and urinary passages. They are antiseptic, antilithic and a uric acid solvent. Howard Gardner.

Honest Medicines Versus Fakes.

President Taft's recent message suggesting an amendment to the Pure Food and Drugs law in its relation to Prepared Medicines, does not refer to such standard medicines as Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and Foley's Kidney Pills, both of which are true medicines carefully compounded of ingredients whose medicinal qualities are recognized by the medical profession itself as the best known remedial agents for the diseases they are intended to counteract. For over three decades Foley's Honey and Tar Compound has been a standard remedy for coughs, colds and affections of the throat, chest and lungs for children and for grown persons, and it retains today its pre-eminence above all other preparations of its kind. Foley Kidney Pills are equally effective and meritorious. Howard Gardner.

WASHING WITHOUT WATER

Is Like Trying to Get Rid of Dandruff Without Herpicide.

Did you ever see any one trying to wash themselves without soap or water?

If you did what would you say of him?

It is every bit as foolish to try to get rid of Dandruff and to prevent Baldness by feeding the germs which cause it, with Canthrarides, Vaseline, Glycerine and similar substances which form the principal ingredients of most so-called Hair Vigors.

Newbro's Herpicide is successful because it attacks and kills the parasitic germ which feeds on the hair roots.

It is the original and only genuine scalp germicide manufactured.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c. in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co. Detroit, Mich.

One dollar bottles guaranteed.

Bathing Suit

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood, N. Y.

HERE we have a European society bud who is wearing one of the fetching bathing costumes that are always on view at Holland's famous seaside resort. The style is distinctly Viennese, due to the fact that it is by a Vienna tailor who makes a specialty of smart water wear. It is as charming as it is modest, yet not quite devoid of a risque touch popular in Europe.

It is made of white pongee silk, with inserts of white-and-blue striped silk. The knickerbockers are of the same materials and may be worn loose or gathered just above the knee. Blue silk stockings and a head band of white silk complete the dainty ensemble.

NEWEST COLORS AND WEAVES

Softness Is Likely to Be the Strong Point of Each—Stripes and Hair Lines Liked.

Apart from a few eccentricities which feminine good taste will soon banish, fashion this season is bringing us some charming creations among the new materials, such as, for instance, the reversible covert coating, one side of which is striped and the other plain.

Silky cashmeres in very soft tones will also be offered to us—gray, terra cotta, blue, etc. These cashmeres also have one side glossy and one striped. This stripe is generally black and white, though sometimes a dark color, such as navy, brown or violet, replaces the black. Among these double-faced materials which will be very popular, and which lend themselves to such multiple and charming combinations, navy blue lined with khaki, gray or plaid of an indistinct pattern, will be very successful. Very chic also are the fine striped materials—black and whites lined with orange or cerise, or plain black lined with mole or Parma violet, or black with fine hair lines in azure, green or mauve, which have an elegance quite their own.

We can imagine nothing which adds more to the slender appearance so much sought after than these stripes and hair lines. Our tailor-mades in these materials will be simple and harmonious, straight without exaggeration. The plain revers will be lined with fancy material, as also will the turned-back hem of the skirt.

Walking Skirts.

Enter the tweed skirt that is short, well fitted, pocketed and rain and dust defying. It is a practical walking skirt for mountain climbers, for "shirtwaist girls," for city business women.

There are many styles to copy when making it. The circular skirt is always good if you are able to prevent sagging at the back seam. This can be done by sewing a tape with the edges the full length of the back seam.

The two-piece skirt with the seams at the sides is very satisfactory.

Then there is the circular form, with piecing at the center line of both back and front.

A deep hem is stitched with eight or ten rows of stitching; a little pocket with a buttoned flap is added, and a narrow stitched belt of the same material finishes the eminently practical garment.

Dainties in Lamp Shades.

Exquisite indeed is the lamp shade of real lace over a delicately tinted silk background. True, such shades come under the head of luxuries and are not inexpensive—but, then, few beautiful and unusual things are!

Very lovely is a shade of squares of Italian filet lace, the pieces joined by bands of Cluny lace and edged with it at top and bottom. And for a fringe what could be more in keeping than little crochet balls, not too close together?

Hand-Bag Mounting.

The use of hand-wrought copper as mounts for handbags of suedes in modish tints and odd shapes is one of the fancies of the season. If there is a monogram on the bag it is carried out in the same metal and the fittings inside the bag or decorated with the copper also.

EMPIRE SHADES FIND FAVOR

Parisians in Reminiscent Mood Where Tints of the Moment Are Concerned.

Empire green (very empire) is the latest whim in Paris, as is everything reminiscent of the empire period. This shade may best be likened to the brilliant yet soft green of the Chinese jade, it is beautiful in every imaginable material, and blends particularly well with silver or gold.

Another late shade is sacre, a combination of cerise and coral. It is exceedingly handsome and effective in ostrich plumage and flowers, but must be used with discretion on account of its brilliance.

In mauve the latest are prelate, evecque and pervenchee. The first two are rich, deep ecclesiastical purples, and pervenchee is a soft, pale lavender, slightly pinkish in tone.

Hener is a beautiful golden yellow, clear and translucent, with just the faintest touch of apricot in the cast. It is practically the only distinct yellow shade in favor at the moment.

SMART COIFFURE.

A high fan of tulle supported by a band of gold galloon is one of the pretty coiffure conceits.

Corset Cover Straps.

When making a corset cover that is to be loose-fitting and fastened by a draw-string at the top and at the waistline, stitch the shoulder straps to the upper edge of the back of the garment. Do not sew them in front, however, but fasten them either with a button and buttonhole or with a small safety pin.

Then when the corset cover is laundered you can unfasten these straps and iron the garment flat, a great convenience.

Survival of the Kimono Sleeve.

It is strange how faithful Dame Fashion is to the kimono sleeves, which still appear on the latest models and we have gone back to the very high waist effect. In most of the new skirts there is a loose pleat at the back, which hangs down to varying lengths, but generally reaches the hem. This has a charming effect, and takes away the extreme severity of the plain, tight skirt. The train which has made its appearance is either cut quite square or is very narrow indeed.

REAL ESTATE MEN GATHER IN DENVER

Annual Convention of Association of Real Estate Exchanges Brings Together Great Number of Men From Half Hundred Cities.

Special to Telegram.

Denver, July 17.—No land boom in the history of the world ever brought together such an aggregation of real estate enthusiasts as that now gathered here for the annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Exchange, a nation wide organization represented by almost every large city in the United States. The importance of the coming convention in the world of real estate is paramount.

A complete real estate office is to be one of the exhibits in a new department inaugurated this year. Here every office detail necessary to the transaction of a large real estate business will be shown in detail, and explained by competent lecturers. The necessity of legislation looking toward the licensing of real estate brokers, etc., will also be urged upon the delegates. Plans for co-operation through a national roster bearing the names of reliable dealers will be another subject of discussion and action. Papers bearing upon the various phases of real estate trade will be read by men of national prominence in the real estate world, and in addition these weighty matters the delegates will be guests at banquets and junketing on a scale calculated to mark the present convention as the red letter meeting of the associations twenty years of life.

The real estaters will be called to order tomorrow morning by President A. S. Taylor of the organization, listen to an invocation by Father William O'Ryan and an address of welcome by John F. Shafroth, Governor of Colorado. From then until the close of the convention, on July 20, their time will be taken up with a consideration of the measures proposed by the organization, attendance at the various functions provided for their amusement, and the addresses of men prominent in the political and financial world of the United States.

Among the more important papers provided for will be one on "Scientific Conservation of the Soil," by H. H. Cross of Chicago; "Uniform State Laws Pertaining to the Transfer of Real Estate," by a member of the National Association; "The Development and Operation of a First Class Loan Department," by a Brooklyn trust officer; "Apartment and Office Building Management," by the president of the National Building Manager's Association; and "Organization and management of a Selling Force," by C. F. Garfield, of Rochester, N. Y. There will also be reports from the committees on: taxation, national legislation, uniform commission rates, and other standing committees. These reports will be followed by a discussion from the floor, so that every real estate man attending the convention will have opportunity to be heard.

The astonishing growth of the association since its inception twenty years ago is amply evidenced by the throngs of visiting delegates that fill the hotel lobbies today, and the enthusiasm with which the proposed measures of the organiation are received.

At last year's convention at Indianapolis the association had a membership of twenty-one real estate boards, representing as many cities of the United States. During the year the membership has increased 100 per cent and today, New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, Detroit, St. Louis, Denver, Duluth, Fresno, Kansas City, Louisville, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, St. Paul, Seattle, Superior, Toledo, Winnepeg, Canada, Atlanta, Bay City, Billings, Birmingham, Butte, Gallatin Valley, Great Falls, Kalamazoo, Memphis, Miles City, Montgomery, Pensacola, Pontiac, Port Huron, Saginaw, Spartanburg, Des Moines, Rochester, Jacksonville, Tampa, and Nashville will be represented at the convention.

MAN COULD EFFECT A CURE

Husband Has Unique Plan for Restoring Wife Who Imagines That She Is at Point of Death.

"There is nothing the matter with your wife, absolutely nothing, but a case of nerves; still she insists she is going to die and if we do not find some way to make her want to live she probably will die."

"If that is all that is the matter, doctor, I will have her well in ten minutes."

"I don't believe it."

"Well, I will. I will go in right now and tell her that you said she could not possibly live, and I shall ask her what she thinks of Widow Simpson for my second wife."

Localized.

In one place, at least, the rose is not permitted to "smell as sweet by any other name," and that place is Scotland.

An attache of the American embassy at London tells of a stranger presenting himself to play golf at North Berwick, seeking out some one in authority upon the matter.

"What name?" asked the dignified official.

"De Neuville," the stranger replied.

"Mon," said the official in a tone of disgust, "we canna bother oorsels wi' names like that at North Berwick. Ye'll stairt in the mornin' at 10:15 to the name of Fairgusson."

Little Surprises.

"You take that seat; I'd rather ride backward than forward."

"Thanks, no; I don't need any pencil. My fountain pen is always in good working order."

"John Smith is my real name, your honor; I never use an alias when I'm run in."

"You have taken your time about it, George, dear; I'd have said yes if you had asked me six months ago."

"I missed my train downtown this morning Maria, on account of having stopped to mail that letter you handed me."

"Go ahead with your conversation, barber; I like to hear you talk."

Unkind.

In a New York street car a young man attracted the attention of the other passengers by leaping from his seat and picking up something from between the slats of the floor. Then he asked, "Did anybody lose a $5 gold piece?" A ministerial looking man got up from his seat at the other end of the car and started toward the young man with outstretched hand.

"Yes," he said, "I dropped a $5 gold piece when I got on, but owing to the crush I couldn't find it."

"Very well," said the young man gleefully, "here's a nickel toward it."

Many a man works himself to death trying to make a living.

SEEK FOR AN OLD FORTUNE

German Heirs of Wealth Missing for Centuries Sue Dresden Bank for $17,500,000.

With a view to tracing a huge inheritance lost for centuries, a syndicate has been formed in Cologne and has retained some prominent German lawyers. Several members of the reichstag are connected with the scheme, which is built up around the vanished estate of Baron von Oruhohn, a field marshal in the Dutch army, who died 234 years ago.

This search has its counterpart in a series of Bavarian mysteries dating still further back, and curiously enough also dealing with Dutch fortunes left to German relatives. In the latter case the descendants of four separate families have joined hands in an effort to acquire the fortunes left to them.

Here are the main facts upon which the various claimants hope to establish their right to the vanished $17,500,000.

In 1636 George Schleder, a German emigrant from the Moselle country, died, leaving about one and three-quarter million dollars to his family. In 1664 Andreas Joas, Schleder's son-in-law, died, leaving $3,500,000 to relatives in Bavaria. In 1707 Johann Joas, a nephew of Andreas, died, bequeathing nearly a million dollars to the same Bavarian family. A year previously a Spanish governor named Jais died at Antwerp, leaving five millions to relatives in Bavaria.

Finally Joseph Pongratz, who, like the two Joases and Schleder, lived and died at Amsterdam, left $7,000,000 to descendants at Sechausen, Germany.

These fortunes have gone astray. That they once existed is beyond all doubt. The heirs of Johann Joas are ready to show that an Augsburg lawyer testified to the arrival of the million on May 2, 1785. The hopeful ones in the case of Jais hold a document registering the banking of their ancestor's fortune in an Augsburg house in 1786.

The beneficiaries under the Pongratz will have even received small cash advance from this fortune during the centuries which have elapsed. Once, for instance, a lucky descendant actually succeeded in obtaining a quarter of a million dollars. This was in 1791.

As recently as 1855 an Augsburg banker named Halder confessed on his death bed that he made his fortune out of the missing Pongratz millions—that the money was in fact lying in his safes. The would-be beneficiaries put forth every effort to obtain their due, but in vain.

The Halder business has lately been amalgamated with the bank of Dresden, and the descendants are now suing the latter concern.

Any man who repeats half he hears talks too much.

CANADIAN PARLIAMENT CONVENES TODAY IN OTTAWA

Reciprocity Agreement With United States is Principal Topic in Connection With Assembling — Canada Will Probably Await Action of This Country in The Matter.

Special to Telegram.

Ottawa, Ont., July 17.—The Canadian Parliament is to convene tomorrow and shortly thereafter the long deferred reciprocity agreement will come up for a vote. Today the much talked of agreement is the subject of discussion among citizenry and government officials alike and a decidedly optimistic future is predicted for the measure.

Sir Wilfred Laurier and his two cabinet ministers, who arrived recently from the Imperial Conference and Coronation ceremonies in London, have conferred with Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Deputy Governor, and semi-official reports of the conference state that the government believes the measure will be brought before the legislators as soon as the redistribution of Parliamentary seats, according to the June census is made. Some members of the official staff even go so far as to predict its earlier consideration.

Among the mass of the people the proposed agreement has been gaining steadily in favor during the interim between the adjournment and the present day, and even the more rabid newspapers have now noticeably lessened their attack.

It is thought, however, in more conservative circles that the hesitation that marked the last Parliament's attitude on this measure will be reflected in the coming session, for it is pointed out that Canadian politicians as a whole, prefer to await the decision of the United States Congress on the matter before committing themselves. If these prognostications prove true a vote of the measure may be delayed until action is taken by the United States.

Women Police for German Cities.

Berlin and Dusseldorf have decided to employ women police officers, and the capital city has already engaged a staff of 30. But their duties are strictly circumscribed. They are to concern themselves only with offenses against children, especially of the baby-farming variety, and in order that they may be properly equipped for the task they are empowered to break into any house where they believe that children are being ill treated. This drastic action is the result of several unpleasant scandals which the authorities are determined to check, but it would be interesting to know how these women police will proceed to break their way into a house that is barred and bolted against them. To invoke the brute strength of the male creature would be humiliating.

Patriotic German Cook.

The kaiser's patriot cook, Karl Jaedicke, a highly salaried official who played an important part in the emperor's campaign for purifying the German language, has just died.

Jaedicke was the first imperial cook who scornfully rejected the flattering title chef, and called himself by the old German Mundkoch. In collaboration with the kaiser, he worked out a complete dictionary of translations of the names of dishes from French into German, and it was under his regime that menus disappeared from the court and Speisekarten, printed in Gothic letters, took their place.

The German language league, a very powerful organization, regarded Jaedicke as a hero, and wanted to make him its honorary vice-president.

The only dish for which Jaedicke could find no German equivalent was mayonnaise; but he got round that difficulty by spelling it "Meionneise," thus giving it a German touch.

The whole staff of the kaiser's kitchen turned out at Jaedicke's funeral, and a speech was delivered lauding him as "an honest German namer of German things."

Butterflies Without Heads.

Two European scientists have been making some curious experiments on caterpillars, the value and meaning of which have not yet been explained.

They had the curiosity to find out whether a caterpillar can turn into a butterfly if you deprive him of his head; also what will the butterfly be like?

By tying ligatures behind the heads, the caterpillars were decapitated. This didn't seem to bother them much, except that they didn't crawl as fast as before.

The greatest difficulty in the experiments was in getting the butterflies out of the chrysales; most of them died, and it was necessary to help the others out. The butterflies thus obtained did not differ from the normal type—except for having no heads.

CLEARED OF CHARGES FAULKNER RE-ELECTED PRINCIPAL SCHOOL

At yesterday afternoon's meeting of the Board of Commissioners the charges against H. H. Faulkner were considered, the board deciding that the defendant was not guilty of the charges preferred. Commissioners Murphy and Brown voted in favor of exonerating him, Commissioner Foushee not voting because he did not hear all of the evidence. Commissioner Brown then moved that Faulkner be re-elected as principal of Graded School No. 1, for negroes. All three commissioners voted in support of the motion.

The charges against Faulkner, which the board was called upon to decide as to his innocence or guilt as set forth in the charges preferred, were "That he is guilty of defrauding teachers under him and employees of the school out of their money and using certain money coming into his hands due them; and he is guilty of misappropriation of public property under his charge and control; and is guilty of fraudulent conduct and unfair dealings with his lodge and church and individuals."

The decision of the board was what was expected by those who had kept up with the investigation. It was evident that the whole matter was nothing more than a negro row, several negroes being determined to oust Faulkner, none of them counting on his ability and shrewdness. While a good deal of the evidence of the prosecution was damaging the defendant was on hand with evidence to refute that offered against him. Especially was this true when a prosecuting witness testified that Faulkner had forged her name to a paper, another witness, having previously testified to this, despite the fact that his name was down as a witness to the signature. However, W. E. Allen testified as a handwriting expert that the signature was that of the woman and more that the name of the witness was in the handwriting of the same person who had endorsed numerous checks made to said witness. This no doubt had a good deal to do with the clearing of Fulkner. J. I. Pope, the negro who had witnessed the signature and then denied it is the same negro who stated that while he was janitor of the school he stole coal from the school and carried it to Faulkner's house. The negro soon after giving this testimony skipped out and has not been seen. He is wanted by the police on the charge of larceny and if caught will be in a fair way for a sentence on the streets, as he has already sworn to stealing coal from the city.

DEFY THE FESTIVE MOSQUITO

All That Is Necessary Is to Grow a Plant That These Pests of Humanity Detest.

Many persons hold a strong opinion regarding the value of certain plants in repelling mosquitoes and in this way preventing the transmission of malaria. The London Lancet says there is no doubt that some powerful odors are repugnant to insects, and not long ago garlic, for example, was thought to possess some prophylactic qualities, since mosquitoes were said to refrain from biting those who smelt strongly of that odoriferous plant. It is also stated by some authors that persons who regularly consume a decoction of lemon peel, which imparts a peculiar odor to the skin and its secretions, escape the bites of insects, which dislike the smell of the skin in such cases. Some trees, shrubs and plants, such as the various kinds of eucalyptus, the castor oil plant and citronella, have a certain reputation for preventing malaria, the suggestion at one time being that this was due to the "balsamic exhalations" which they emitted.

Major H. D. Larymore, retired, of the British army, who saw service in West Africa, has called attention to the peculiar properties of the "mosquito plant," a species of basil, Ocymum viride, natural order Labiatae, in repelling mosquitoes. During ten years' service in West Africa he sowed seeds of the basil plant at every station where he resided, and to this he attributes the freedom which he and his wife experienced from attacks of "fever" during that period.

Major Larymore draws attention to an analysis showing that the leaves of the basil plant yield a volatile oil which contains 32 per cent. of thymol as well as other aromatic substances. The peculiar properties of the Ocymum viride are therefore believed to be due to the thymol given off by the leaves.

If it could be shown that the odor emitted by these leaves invariably repelled mosquitoes or that the placing of a plot or two of basil beside the bed of the sleeper would save him from being bitten in the night by bloodthirsty anophelines, or that the sowing the garden around the house with seeds of the basil plant would keep mosquitoes from entering the grounds or dwelling, we would then be able to congratulate ourselves upon being on the way to a simple solution of the difficult and costly question of the prevention of malaria.

"Didn'a I tell you that when you met a man in hard luck you ought to greet him with a smile?" said the wise and good counselor.

"Yes," replied the flintey-souled person. "I went even further than that. I gave him the laugh."—Washington Star.

FRANCE IS TENDING TOWARD MONARCHY

Republic's Failure in Law Enforcement And State of Anarchy it is Believed Will Drive County Back to This System of Government —How Tariff Has Increased Meat Prices in France.

(By GEORGE DUFRESNE.)
Special to Telegram.

Paris, July 17.—The more closely one studies the signs of the times the more firmly convinced one becomes that France is one the eve of a new era. The change that I prophecy is that before long France will have ceased to be a republic. The people all over France are thoroughly disgusted with the muddle the various republican governments, following one another in rapid succession, have made of the country's affairs.

We are cursed with a greater amount of red tape than any other country in the world, Russia not even excepted. The authorities are unable to command the respect of the people and one community after another practically revolts against the government. The laws of the republic are no longer respected. Young men by the thousand refuse to serve in the army and are not punished for their disobedience, and during the last few months a fashion has grown up among discontented communities to organize strikes with a view to paralyzing the machinery of administrative government. The wine growers in the Aube refused to carry on local government, and dared the tax collectors to appear in their midst. The inhabitants of Coitat, near Marseilles, have taken a leaf out of the book of the Aubois. The men employed by the Messageries Maratime came out on strike. The shopkeepers closed their establishments in sympathy with them, and joined them in a procession through the streets.

Three thousand people marched through the little town. At a given signal all the demand papers distributed by the tax collectors during the last few days were collected, placed in a heap and burned. This was the strikers' way of showing their defiance of all constituted authority. Not content with burning the tax papers, they conceived the idea of stopping all railroad traffic. The strikers with their wives and children bivouacked on the railroad, their idea being to prevent a train from starting. The police commissary, a tactful man, finally prevailed upon the strikers to allow the train to move. While making this concession the strikers do not intend to give up the struggle. They mean to fight to the last ditch.

If things of this kind are allowed to go on unpunished nothing in the world can save France from the horrors of absolute anarchy and as the republican authorities have lost their nerve and grip the way seems open for Prince Victor Napoleon, who though he may have none of the great gifts of his great ancestor, at least is a man who is generally respected. A man whose patriotism is undoubted and who possessed enough money to push his plans forward with considerable energy.

It is known that Princess Clementine, or Princess Napoleon, as she is now, is engaged in active propagation of her husband's interests and that she is receiving great encouragement from a number of very influential republicans. It is hinted that M. Briand and his political friends are favoring a movement that will place un homme de valeur at the head of government. A coup d'etat of a peaceful kind, I have reason to believe, is in contemplation, but what form it will take is at present impossible to guess.

The continuous rise in the price of meat has opened the eyes of Parisians to the inevitable consequences of the protectionist regime. Since the coming into force of the tariff law of 1902 the price of beef in Paris has increased 43.55 per cent., that of veal 40 per cent, and that of mutton 47 per cent. These figures were given at a great meeting held the other day by the Paris retail butchers.

The president of the butchers' syndicate, M. Lefevre, declared that the principal cause of the rise in prices is protectionist legislation. In the first place, exorbitant tariffs have been set up on imported cattle and meat, and as though it were not enough, a number of restrictions have been placed on the importation of cattle, ostensibly for sanitary reasons, but really with a view to ensuring to the home breeders the monopoly of the French meat market.

"These measures," said M. Fefevre, "were voted in 1902, and their aim was the protection of the French breeder against foreign competition. The result, however, has been that our flocks and herds, instead of increasing, have, during the last few years, decreased. It is therefore necessary to abrogate the protectionist tariffs, which do not enrich the state. The meat trade is being ruined, and the working classes in the towns have to go without an essential article of food."

It was pointed out that the duties imposed by the tariff of 1902 amount to about one-third of the value in the case of live stock. The duty on meat amounts to 5 cents per pound. Then the carriage and octroi duty are added to this—I am citing M. Lefevre's figures—beef or mutton imported from abroad pays approximately 8 cents per pound—a prohibitive sum. It is not surprising that the meeting passed a resolution in favor of the abrogation of the ultra-protectionist tariff established in 1902, and of the total exemption from duty of live stock imported from French colonies.

So many monuments have been erected in Paris during the last few years that the authorities now consider the time has arrived to impose restrictions. Instead of raising so many statues it is contended that space would be saved if commemorative bas-reliefs were placed beside the names of boulevards and streets. It his also been suggested that, in the interests of true art, the municipal council should not give its consent for a monument to be erected until the model has been passed by a technical committee.

By way of avoiding premature glorification a municipal councilorproposes that no monument should be raised until the person whose memory it is desired to perpetuate has been dead ten years.

The famous Parisian Apaches are astir again. Three young men, who spent the night in carousing and picking quarrels in a dozen different establishments, woud up their revel by murdering a man in the street for the pleasure of the thing.

The young men, each of whom is about 20 years of age, proceeded from one barroom to another. In each case they made it a point to pick a quarrel with the other persons on the premises. For some time their fun was limited to taking up glasses and hurling them over the counter, or flinging bottles at the heads of the customers. Once or twice they had hand-to-hand fights with persons whom they disturbed and as they were strong fellows, they usually got the better of their antagonists.

Two o'clock came, and the three were turned out of the various cafes as the closing hour had arrived. Their exploits were then continued in the streets. A young man was just taking leave of his sweetheart. They saw this, walked over to him, and, taking him by the collar, flung him into the middle of the road. The wonder is that in the course of all these exploits not a policeman happened to cross their path. They had barely sent the lover sprawling when a young Italian workman who was quietly going home, came around a corner. He was face to face with one of the three ruffians, who, without any warning, plunged a knife into a vital part and killed him almost on the spot. The lover, who had meanwhile recovered, heard the dying man's groans, and was able at last to find a policeman. By that time, however, the trio had taken to flight, but as the police know their names and occupation it is hoped, for the safety of the general public, that the miscreants will soon be under lock and key.

The Very Reason.

Hoax—It's hard to keep a good man down.

Joax—That's why they put such heavy monuments over some of them, I guess.

Strange Peoples From All Over The World Attended Coronation

Photos copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

KING GEORGE of England rules over diversified peoples, and they sent representatives to London to take part in his coronation. Some of these visitors were official, but many of the most interesting were entirely unofficial and had flocked to London by the lure of the English equivalents of dollars. The amusement resorts in and around London harbored these strangers, and residents and other visitors paid their money to see them. Some of the unusual visitors are shown in the above picture. There is a band of Somalis from Africa, their leader being shown at the right of the line. They are wearing their native garb and are fitted up for war according to the Somali ideas. The other picture shows a scene in a reproduction of a lace bazaar at Lucknow, India. Laces with threads of real gold were here made and sold. The youthful salesman was one of the attractions of the place, and the expression of his face and his wondering eyes show that he enjoyed looking at the others fully as much as they enjoyed looking at him.

"What we want," said the peace promoter, "is a system that will permit candid discussion to take the place of actual conflict."

"Don't you think," inquired the man who was reading the sporting page, "that our professional pugilists have come pretty near solving the problem?"—London Opinion.

COCAINE SELLERS GIVEN SENTENCES

Municipal Court yesterday morning was entirely given over to the conviction of five negresses, arrested for cocaine dealing. This class of law breakers, which the police declare causes far more extensive demoralization of the criminals of the city than all others represented among them, is fast being punished, the last quintette making more than a dozen that have fallen into the toils of the law.

Two habitual partakers of the drug "peached" on the women yesterday and the joints were broken up by proving the guilt of their owners and sentencing them to work for the county. Lou Wooding was convicted on only one charge and was given a sentence of 8 months in the workhouse by Judge Fines.

Rose Joyce and Ila Thompson were held on two charges for dispensing "coke", which is the abbreviated term used by the initiated when expressing their desires. In the first case against them both were proven guilty and given ten months in the workhouse. Both plead guilty when arraigned the second time and prayer for judgment was entered in each case; no sentence as yet being passed upon them.

Mary Headen and Ida Maxwell were both convicted for the offense. Judgment in each case was deferred until Wednesday morning, when they will be sentenced if they are yet in the city. The opportunity is given for both to depart immediately and escape punishment as they have several small children each, who would be a burden upon the county to support.

BALKAN PENINSULA IS EUROPE'S APPENDIX

Is Forever Threatening Trouble—Attitude of Turkey to Montenegro Source of Probable Disturbance—News And Views From German Capital.

(By FREDERICK TURNER.)
Special to Telegram.

Berlin, July 17.—The Balkan peninsula might well be called the vermiform appendix of Europe, forever threatening the peace and well being of the whole continent, and at times like the present it seems as if a serious surgical operation might have to be resorted to to relieve Europe forever from the danger of congenital disturbance.

The latest news from Albania shows that the situation has now grown worse than ever—a fact which is corroborated as well at Cettinje as at Constantinople.

The Turkish government has resolved to give Shefket Torgue Pasha a free hand in the pursuit of the insurgents, even if it involves the crowding of the Montenegrin frontier. If this determination is realized the consequence will be incalculable, as it is certain that the transgression of the Montenegrin frontier would be followed by an immediate attack upon the Turkish troops.

Meanwhile, Montenegro demands ample compensation from the Turkish government for the asylum afforded to the Mallsseres—from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 francs—while Turkey is resolved to enter upon no discussion of the subject. Mallsseres, according to the latest reports, firmly hold all the strategic points and Montenegro is amply supplying them with the provisions and ammunition. The Malisseres trust to European intervention, and expects for their persistence the reward of autonomy.

The Miridites have recently received several quick-fires from a French gun factory. The immediate cause of the persistent opposition of the Malisseres is said to be ambiguity of the Turkish promises, also the exclusion of theMalisseres from the amnesty promised to the Moslem Arnauts, which is bitterly resented by them. The sum of $50,000 promised by the Sultan, according to a remark of the Turkish Ambassador in Rome to the Marquis di San Giuliano, is not intended for rebuilding the peasants' dwellings, but for the renewal of the blockhouses.

The unsettled political situation in France, which never seems to improve when one cabinet relieves another, is giving the diplomats of Europe much worry. One never knows what may happen in France as long as present conditions remain, and to change them would take all the courage and skill of a man of equal patriotism and genius. But if there be such a man in France he must so far have kept himself carefully hidden and so the country passes through one crisis after the other with increasing rapidity. And every crisis is a danger in impulsive France, where any day a pretender may take advantage of popular exasperation to impose himself by a coup d'etat on a democracy of ineffective parliamentary methods.

Indeed it is by no means unlikely that Prince Victor Bonaparte who is the head of the plebiscite party, may soon rule the destinies of France.

The plebiscite party, which gives allegiance to Prince Victor Napoleon, the husband of Princess Clementine of Belgium, has selected this moment of chaos to appear in the political arena. This organization has been endowed with fresh life, and a strong committee has been formed. The Plebiscite party has established its headquarters in a busy centre of Paris, is actively engaged in disseminating political propaganda, and if reports are to be credited, it is receiving a certain measure of public sympathy and support. I have been informed by a member of the committee that in the event of the dissolution of the present French parliament the organization would not hesitate to issue its program and to launch an appeal to the country.

Altogether the French ship of state is sailing on a dangerous sea, and it remains to be seen whether Pilot Fallieres will be able to avoid the rocks and shoals with which her course is studded.

The Russian Minister of the Interior has just sent a bill into the Duma for strengthening the predominance of the Russian element among the settled population of the Murman coast, on the Arctic Ocean, and bordering on Norway, which is another step in the nationalizing policy of M. Stolypin, to the detriment of foreigners in Russia's borderlands, as for instance, the recent restrictions directed against Germans in the western provinces.

According to this law project, the real Russian settlers in the repion iplicated are to be favored, while foreigners and even Russian subjects of foreign extraction, will be debarred from all rights of holding landed property within a hundred versts of the frontiers on the Kola Peninsula, and on several islands off the Murman coast, adjacent to Norway.

This bill also refers to the necessity for settling the water limit against foreign fishermen off this coast, which the Russian government wishes to make twelve miles, and against which the British government protests until the question is made one of international agreement.

A number of Russia's most influential political newspapers headed by the "Novoje Vremja," are working up a strong anti-American feeling in Russia, stating that the United States is trying to stir up trouble in Manchuria. In a recent article the "Novoje Vremja" accuses the United States of an attempt to convince the Chinese government that Russia is planning to make up for her territorial losses in the Japanese war by annexing Manchuria. The United States minister at Pekin co-operating with Mr. Fred Douglas Fisher, United States consul at Mukden, the paper says, has mapped out a plan which is to render the cultural mission of Russia and Japan in Manchuria exceedingly difficult and which may lead to war.

The plan consists of a proposal that a number of land-lets in Manchuria of from five to fifty thousand acres should be set apart by the Chinese government for cultivation according to the very latest American system. The result—or, rather, one of the many beneficial results—of this innovation will be to transform Manchuria into a centre of civilization and material prosperity, and thereby to make it outgrow the cultural boons which Russia and Japan have to offer it. Another effect will be to make it clear to all whom it may concern that Manchuria is in fact as well as in name a province of China, and must be treated accordingly. Of course, at the same time it will give Americans quite as firm a footing in Manchuria as Japan and Russia now possess. In return for this all that China is now asked to do is to supply the necessary workmen and to protect the colonisers by maintaining sufficient military forces in the province. That sounds like "check and mate" uttered by the United States government to Russia and Japan.

The "Novoje Vremja" remarks rather bitterly, that the syndicate of the American Harvester Company, which will supply the agricultural implements for the enterprise, has as its president the American minister in Pekin.

This article in Russia's most influential newspaper is especially noteworthy because it shows that Russia and Japan consider that they have paid, and paid heavily, for Manchuria, and they are determined to make a stand for it. Thato either state has the intention of handing over its railroads there to China when the time limit expires, it would be puerile to imagine. They regard Manchuria as theirs politically, and every scheme devised by outsiders, even though it be purely commercial or agricultural, which may render this their final aim, more difficult of attainment, is the work of a disguised enemy and is, of course, political.

What may be termed a brilliant game of political chess is being played by Russia and Japan against China, and the United States, with the latter, are scoring heavily. So long as the parties keep to the chess-board all will be well. But there is danger that an attempt may be made to decide the issue on the battlefield—that China may be involved in a campaign against Japan and Russia.

The loyal citizens of Wiesbaden propose to raise a great fund, and build the Kaiser a palace near the town. This plan is the result of the fierce competition which goes on between different German towns for the sovereign's favor. the Wiesbadeners are under the impression that their Spa has lost the Kaiser's patronage, for during the last three years he has more or less ignored it in favor of Bad Homburg.

The present palace at Wiesbaden is uncomfortable, and it is situated in a noisy part of the town. The Kaiserin is kept awake at night by the noise of passing trams. It is expected that if a new palace is built Wilhelm will stay there for a term once every year.

Some Wiesbadeners are against the project, as they believe that the Kaiser is dissatisfied with their town for another reason. He complained in 1906, it is stated, of the bad manners of the residents, who followed him in troops everywhere.

The bankers of Germany are anxious about the money that would be necessary should the government decide to mobilize the army.

For this purpose there is a sum of $24,000,000 enclosed in the Julius Tower at Spandau. But the government has for a long time past been of opinion that this sum would prove wholly inadequate, and that it it will be necessary to increase it.

Recently the director of the Bank of Germany declared that in his opinion that German banks would not be able in case of war, to supply the necessary sums to the army, because as soon as it was known that war was imminent the depositors would besiege the banks in crowds and withdraw their money. In these circumstances he suggests that the war treasure in the Julius Tower should be increased to $60,000,000.

I hear that the War Minister will shortly put forward such a demand in the Reichstag. Public opinion is, however, unfavorable to this step, on the ground that it would lock up so much gold at a time when there is barely sufficient coin for commercial purposes.

Escaped With His Life.

"Twenty-one years ago I faced an awful death," writes H. B. Martin, Port Harrelson, S. C. "Doctors said I had consumption and the dreadful cough I had looked like it, sure enough. I tried everything I could hear of, for my cough, and was under the treatment of the best doctor in Georgetown, S. C., for a year, but could get no relief. A friend advised me to try Dr. King's New Discovery. I did so, and was completely cured. I feel that I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure." PHOTOGRAPHY NOT NEW ART

For Centuries Idea Has Been Understood But Only Recently Has It Been Perfected.

The first sunlight photograph of a human face was obtained in 1839 by Prof. John William Draper of New York university by the daguerreotype process. The centenary of Draper's birth has just been celebrated.

As long ago as the year 990 a Grecian princess, Eudoxia Makrembossa, observed and recorded what is supposed to have been the first photochemical reaction. Fabricius in 1556 discovered the darkening of silver chloride when exposed to light, and in 1727 J. H. Schulze, a German philologist, utilized the discovery for copying. The method was, of course, crude. Some years thereafter J. A. C. Charles prepared in France single shadow photographs, and Thomas Wedgewood made a camera and sought to take photographs on silver nitrate paper. They were not successes.

In 1816 Niepce invented a heliographic process. Daguerre became his partner in 1839 and together they perfected the process. Professor Draper carried the work forward and astonished the world with his photographic reproductions of the human face. Since that time photography has developed year by year, passing through the snapshot stage and on to motion pictures.

Confessions of a Tourist

One of the greatest drawbacks to the pleasures of traveling is the foolish things that people always feel called upon to buy and carry home with them.

I was talking about this yesterday to some of the women passengers on the steamer which is carrying us from Sydney to Hongkong, and each of them began to confess to the foolish things that she was taking home.

Mrs. Clark, a nice, sensible looking woman from Wisconsin, had a bottle of water from the River Jordan which she acquired eight months ago, and all her thoughts and emotions had been concentrated upon getting that bottle home without breaking it. She freely admitted that she did not know why she had it, or what she should do with it after getting it home, but to achieve that feat had become a sort of endurance contest with her.

A pleasant looking music teacher from Davenport, Ia., who is traveling with a young nephew, was cherishing as her chief treasure a basket full of slips of ivy cut from the graves of her favorite musicians. She had carried it in her hand half way around the world, and she expected to carry it the other half.

After I heard about these and a few more of the other women's possessions I felt quite superior to think of all the things I had refrained from getting until I remembered my cocoanut shells and the native hats and the basket and the alligators. I haven't any alligators now. They were with us on a trip that Charles and I made to Bermuda.

I cannot really say that I regret having bought my carved cocoanut shells in Tahiti, though they have been somewhat inconvenient to carry. There are six of them, carved in a set, and they are rolling around the floor of our stateroom now, bumping their heads together like croquet balls, as it seems impossible to anchor them in any way.

Charles was inclined to think me rather foolish to get anything so inconvenient to carry until he bought the carved spears and the breastplate and the boomerangs and the tomtoms. The boomerangs can be packed in the trunks, but the other things have to be carried by hand, and as the spears are too long to stand upright or to lie on the floor of the stateroom they have to be placed obliquely across it, and be stepped over or under every time one goes through the door.

My basket would not be so hard to carry if it had a handle, but it is shaped like a flat chopping bowl and it is about as big in diameter as an umbrella. Its unusual size is, in fact, what attracted me to it. I am sure I have never seen anything so large at home.

I must say that Charles acted like a lamb about carrying it, and didn't seem to mind it much until I began to display a tendency to buy a native hat, which was almost as big as the basket. Fortunately, Charles also was greatly taken with the native hats, so we each bought one, and then we had to buy another special trunk to put them in.

I think I have never told anybody all about the alligators. They were the loveliest little baby alligators anybody ever saw. They were not more than a foot long. I bought them from an old fisherman in Bermuda. I thought I could take them home to Bobby and Sammy to play with. When they grew up I thought we could give them to the Lincoln park zoo or something. I had a covered traveling box made for them. It looked like a valise and it had a little water tank at one end. The alligators really were not much trouble, except the time they got out on the ship and nearly created a panic among the women passengers, who all acted very silly, I thought.

But I got them to New York and smuggled them into the hotel where we were stopping for a few days. There the poor little things died on my hands and I didn't know how to dispose of their corpses. I didn't want to give them to the chambermaid for fear she would make a fuss, and I felt embarrassed about dropping them into the waste basket or anywhere about the hotel. So I just opened one of our windows one day when Charles was not in and tossed them out.

I think probably their sudden arrival on the sidewalk created quite a commotion from the sounds that followed. But I never looked out and I burned up the traveling crate in the fireplace. When Charles came home I just told him the alligators had died and he did not ask any questions.

Just now the nephew of the music teacher from Davenport, a sophisticated young person for his fifteen years, came up with a grin and sat down beside me.

"I saw you admiring auntie's ivy slips yesterday afternoon," said he. "Well, if you'll promise not to tell her, I'll tell you about those slips. They didn't come from no musician's grave. They're just plain, ordinary ivy.

"You see, she left her basket with me for two weeks in the pension at Leipsic, while she went over to Dresden, and I forgot to water them, and they all died on me. So I just went out in the pension garden and got some more ivy and filled up the basket again, and she's just as well satisfied as she was before. What people don't know don't hurt them."

ELEVEN INNING CONTEST WON BY CHARLOTTE

It Was Beautiful Game But Finish Bad For Patriots—Morrisey and Sheesley Did the Pitching, With Honors Even — Errorless Ball Played by Doyleites.

Charlotte, July 17.—In a beautiful 11-inning game the Hornets trimmed the Patriots, the score being four to three. Morrisey and Sheesley were on the mound and honors were about evenly divided, each yielding seven hits.

The visitors scored twice in the fourth on singles by Fuller and Carroll and a double by Clapp. In the seventh with two men on bases Coutts singled to left and cleared the bases, coming home before the ball could be returned. In the ninth doubles by Loman and Carroll brought in a run and tied the score. With the bases full in the eleventh Cross singled and brought in the winning run.

A great catch by Doak, a stop of a difficult grounder by Doyle and the playing of Agnew featured.

TWINS TOOK THE OPENING GAME FROM SPINNERS

Winston-Salem, July 17.—In a game abounding with brilliant fielding the Twins took the opening number of the series from Greenville by the score of 2 to 1. Both pitchers were effective and the score should have been one to nothing in favor of Swindell. The work of Swindell was high class. He struck out twelve men, causing the hardest hitters of the Greenville team to fan with men on bases. Ridgeway's record was not so good, but poor fielding caused the extra run.

In the fielding Goodman featured for the visitors at short; Sharpe played a pretty game at second, making one pretty running catch of a Texas leaguer. Cashion in right made the prettiest throw seen here this season to catch a runner at third. Gates made one sensational run for a catch of a foul over behind the colored bleachers, while his stop of a high bounder with the bases full also featured.

Batteries: Ridgeway and Kite; Swindell and Dailey.

THE ELECTRICIANS SHORTCIRCUIT THE MUSICIANS

Anderson, S. C., July 17.—A home run by Outfielder Yount for the locals in the third inning with three men on gave the locals a lead which the visitors were unable to overcome. An error followed by a homer in the third for the visitors gave them their first runs and three successive hits gave the Spartans their last run. The directors of the club have received signatures from a number of citizens to pay the debt at the end of the season and the club seems to be fairly steadied now.

TOMMY STOUCH BACK AT HELM OF GREENVILLE TEAM

Greenville, July 17.—Thomas C. Stouch has been signed as manager of the Greenville baseball club and will take charge of the team Thursday. He is expected in Greenville Wednesday afternoon. Manager Dick Smith will be deposed. It is thought he will be given an opportunity to sign on the team as a player with the arrival of Stouch, who won the pennant for Greenville last year. Several of the players now on the team will probably be released. Thursday will be Boosters day for the team here with Spartanburg and an admission of fifty cents will be charged, extra proceeds to be used for the club which is in considerable debt. Stouch will be heartily welcomed and a rise in the percentage column is expected within the near future.

"LISTENS" LIKE EASY MONEY

Baseball Fans Insured Against Rain, With Financial Balm for Their Disappointment.

In case you are going to take a day off, without pay, to see the ball game, or to go to the country, and it rains and the game is called off, or the day's outing is postponed on account of bad weather what are you going to do about it? Who is to pay you for your lost time? Answer—Take out one of the new immune policies against rain risks. It is a great scheme. If it rains you win enough to send your family away for a couple of weeks in the summer.

Promoters of outdoor fetes take out a rain risk policy and then go right ahead with their plans, not caring whether the sun shines or not. If it is a fine day the crowds come to the fete and the promoters make money. If it rains and the crowds stay at home the promoters don't care anyhow. They cash in the insurance policy and make money out of the insurance underwriters.

DIAMOND DUST

Where They Play Today.

Greensboro at Charlotte.
Greenville at Winston.
Spartanburg at Anderson.

Lost in the eleventh.

Anderson seems to be doing business at the old stand.

The "Deacon" had one bad inning and the game went to Charlotte on that.

Sheesley is the most consistent pitcher that Charlotte has, in our judgment.

Why didn't Greenville get that one run instead of the Twins? "Too much Swindell."

Winston won by a run and the Patriots lost the same way. Close, but its all in Clancy's favor.

Swindell and Walters will probably be pitted against each other again Thursday. Clean fielding and fair umpiring will give Greensboro the game.

There is no danger of an immediate dissolution of the league. Those who have kept up with the league well know that the same kind of talk has been heard for four seasons, but it never fools anybody.

The team will come back here Thurs day for a series of three games with Winston. This time Doyle's men have blood in their eyes for Clancy and his tribe. Hope Nugent will be the umpire instead of Liebrich.

BLIND TIGERS ARE SCORED BY JUDGE ALLEN AT DURHAM

Durham, July 17.—The special term of Superior Court for Durham county, called for the purpose of clearing the crowded docket of the blind tiger cases, convened this morning with Judge Oliver H. Allen presiding.

In his charge to the grand jury this morning Judge Allen declared that the two most fruitful sources of crime in any community was neglected children and the illegal sale and manufacture of whiskey. Judge Allen charged the grand jury to confine their investigations to these two lines and allow the other work to go over until the regular term of court.

"One mistake that we often make in trying to prevent crime is in not getting at the source of crime. We do not pay enough attention to the causes that bring about crime. We are constantly making criminals while we are attempting to punish crime.

"One of the most fruitful sources of crime is neglected childhood. A mistake that we are making is in allowing the children of the community to develop into criminals because we neglect them and turn our attention too much to the punishment of crime that is already committed. There is hardly a term of court held anywhere but that there are a number of children up for committing some crime. A little investigation discloses the fact that these children become criminals because of neglect.

"I want you, at this term of court, to determine if there are any orphans or neglected children in the county. If you should find such neglected children it is your duty to report it to the clerk of the court and homes will be found for the children.

"Another fruitful source of crime is the use of intoxicating liquors. It has been demonstrated that 85 per cent of the crime committed in this country is traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors. Take up this docket here this morning—and I haven't look at it—and you squeeze the whiskey out of it and we won't be here till this evening.

"The people of North Carolina have passed the prohibition law, and it is up to the people to see that it is enforced. I have never tried a son for killing his father but that whiskey was back of the crime. I have never tried a father for killing his son, a brother for killing his brother, a husband for killing his [illegible] but that whiskey was back of [illegible] crime. "I charge you, therefore, to inv[illegible] gate these two sources of crime, the n[illegible] lect of children and the sale and m[illegible] facture of whiskey and to do your [illegible] duty."
